Short introduction to DWC and Oliver Kopsch

Oliver Kopsch is of German origin and has been in the field of decentralised water management for many years.

Having hands-on experience in the field and dealing directly with clients he learned very quickly that clients need overall and effective water solutions and not single products that may only solve individual water problems and work in isolation.

Through growing client demand for complete water solution packages he has founded DWC, DecRen Water Consult early 2006.

One of DWC most prestigious clients is Six Senses, a top class tourism company where DWC helps in improving the overall water efficiency in international resorts.

DWC stands for "Decentralised and Renewable" based water consultancy and offers integrated, product independent solutions to solve any water related problem based on renewable energies and on a decentralised basis.

Along with national and international top water experts DWC can now offer overall water solution from one single source while maintaining its independency.

His original background is international marketing & communication for multinational companies in the finance sector.
